

O Holy Night

It is strange how the coldness, darkness and slumber of night have kept awake many a poet. But maybe it is the shivering stars under the blanket of the same sky that have accompanied those who await the dawn. Indeed it is strange how a night so long, so restless and so desperate will be so graced with the music of the angels, the peace of a sleeping Child and the presence of the Star more radiant than the morning sun. It is this night that the song speaks about; it is this divine presence that the song sings of and to.
