JO: Listen everyone: I have risen to the occasion this year and written us An Operatic Tragedy!
BETH: And we're going to perform it for Christmas!
AMY: No, I can't! Not with my flat nose.
MEG: Jo, do you really think we should? What with this awful war--
JO: When have we let anything defeat us? Years from now people will talk about us: 'One Christmas Eve four penniless and ragged sisters put on an Operatic Tragedy for all of Concord! (start VAMP)

#24 The Fire Within Me

JO: "It was several days before Christmas.

The sisters sat about the parlor and grumbled about their fate.

Meg, the oldest and most romantic, said, 'It's not fair some girls have pretty things while we have nothing.'

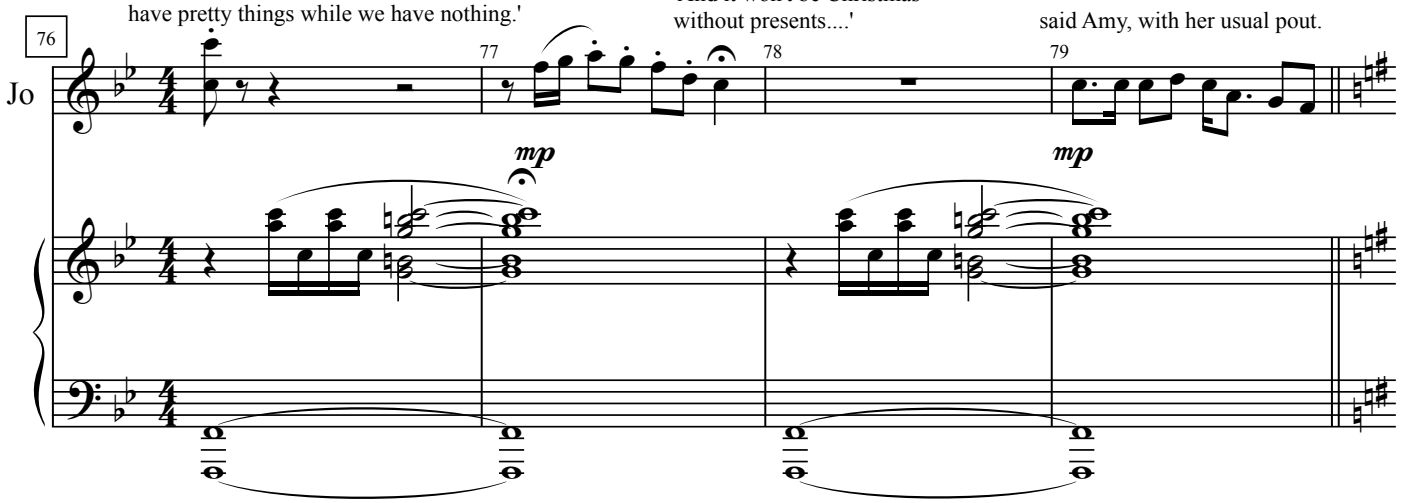
'And it won't be Christmas without presents....'

said Amy, with her usual pout.



'And we haven't got father to read to us,' said Jo, who yearned to travel and write great books.

Only Beth, sitting contented, said, in a tone so sweet even angels would have listened, 'But we've got each other.'
